NEW QUESTION: 1
In which of the following situations was the HR manager incorrect in their handling of FMLA medical certification?
A. The employee was given 5 calendar days to provide medical certification.
B. The employer disagreed with the certification by the employee's doctor, so it paid to have the employee seen by a second provider.
C. None of the above options were incorrect.
D. The employer had its own medical certification that it used, but it contained information identical to the DOL's WH-380 form.
Answer: A
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Answer option B is correct.

Under the FMLA, employees must be given at least 15 calendar days to obtain appropriate medical certification. Under certain conditions, employers may request a secondary exam, and employers are allowed to use their medical certification form provided it conforms to the requirements of the DOL's form WH-380.

NEW QUESTION: 2
After the install process, a software application executed an online activation process. After a few months, the system experienced a hardware failure. A backup image of the system was restored on a newer revision of the same brand and model device. After the restore, the specialized application no longer works. Which of the following is the MOST likely cause of the problem?
A. The restored image backup was encrypted with the wrong key.
B. The application is unable to perform remote attestation due to blocked ports.
C. The binary files used by the application have been modified by malware.
D. The hash key summary of hardware and installed software no longer match.
Answer: D
Explanation:
Different software vendors have different methods of identifying a computer used to activate software.
However, a common component used in software activations is a hardware key (or hardware and software key). This key is a hash value generated based on the hardware (and possibly software) installed on the system.
For example, when Microsoft software is activated on a computer, the software generates an installation ID that consists of the software product key used during the installation and a hardware key (hash value generated from the computer's hardware). The installation ID is submitted to Microsoft for software activation.
Changing the hardware on a system can change the hash key which makes the software think it is installed on another computer and is therefore not activated for use on that computer. This is most likely what has happened in this question.
Incorrect Answers:
A: It is very unlikely that the binary files used by the application have been modified by malware. Malware doesn't modify application binary files.
B: A backup image of the system was restored onto the new hardware. Therefore, the software configuration should be the same as before. It is unlikely that blocked ports preventing remote attestation is the ca use of the problem.
C: A backup image of the system was restored onto the new hardware. If the restored image backup was encrypted with the wrong key, you wouldn't be able to restore the image.
