- A. Traffic that is destined to 10.10.10.0/24 from the R1 LAN network uses static route instead of RIPv2, but the traffic is forwarded to the ISP instead of the internal network.
- B. Traffic that is destined to 10.10.10.0/24 from the R1 LAN network uses RIPv2 instead of static route, because the static route AD that is configured is higher than the AD of RIPv2.
- C. Traffic that is destined to 10.10.10.0/24 from the R1 LAN network uses static route instead of RIPv2, because the static route AD that is configured is less than the AD of RIPv2.
- D. Traffic that is destined to 10.10.10.0/24 from the R1 LAN network uses RIPv2 instead of static route, because the static route AD that is configured is 255.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

First use the "show ip route" command to check the R1 routing table:

As we see here, 10.10.10/24 is learned from RIP. Notice that although there is a static route on R1 to this destination (you can check with the "show running-config" on R1 to see the line "ip route 10.10.10.0 255.255.255.0 172.16.14.2 200"), this static route is not installed to the routing table because it is not the best path because the Administrative Distance (AD) of this static route is 200 while the AD of RIP is 120 so R1 chose the path with lowest AD so it chose path advertised via RIP.
