NEW QUESTION: 1

DRAG DROP

You use SQL Server 2014 Enterprise Edition. Your database contains a partitioned table named AuditData. AuditData is partitioned by year. Partition 1 contains data from the year 2010 and prior.

Management has decided to archive all AUDITDATA records from 2010 and prior. Management wants the records to be removed from the database entirely and provided to the backup team as a zipped text file. The data must no longer reside in the database. There is very little tolerance for performance degradation in your environment.

You need to remove all 2010 and prior data from the AuditData table by using the least amount of system resources possible. Develop the solution by selecting and arranging the required SQL actions in the correct order.

You may not need all of the actions.

NEW QUESTION: 4

- What should be part of a comprehensive network security plan?
- A. Delay deployment of software patches and updates until their effect on end-user equipment is well known and widely reported
 - B. Physically secure network equipment from potential access by unauthorized individuals.
 - C. Encourage users to use personal information in their passwords to minimize the likelihood of passwords being forgotten.
 - D. Minimize network overhead by deactivating automatic antivirus client updates.
 - E. Allow users to develop their own approach to network security.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Computer systems and networks are vulnerable to physical attack; therefore, procedures should be implemented to ensure that systems and networks are physically secure. Physical access to a system or network provides the opportunity for an intruder to damage, steal, or corrupt computer equipment, software, and information. When computer systems are networked with other departments or agencies for the purpose of sharing information, it is critical that each party to the network take appropriate measures to ensure that its system will not be physically breached, thereby compromising the entire network. Physical security procedures may be the least expensive to implement but can also be the most costly if not implemented. The most expensive and sophisticated computer protection software can be overcome once an intruder obtains physical access to the network.
